RP children confirm abuses for UN report

By Vincent Cabreza
PDI Northern Luzon Bureau

BAGUIO CITY—WHAT'S THE WORST ABOUT the treatment of Filipino children?

A Philippine report that will contribute to a world children study by the United Nations Children's Fund (Unicef) confirmed the following:

- Illegal drug syndicates now prefer to hire children as drug runners because of their loyalty to their employers and elusiveness to government law enforcers.

- Filipino child laborers now endure amounts of stress that is equivalent to what adults suffer at work.

- Upgrades in media technology are actually harmful to children, whose sole venue for "socialization" had switched from the nanny (yaya) to the television.

- More children are left unattended or in the care of a dysfunctional family set up because more mothers leave for work in the cities or abroad.

- Children are finally developing their own biases, which perpetuate conflicts, when surveyed Christian children portrayed their Muslim counterparts as rude and violent, and Muslim children described their Christian playmates as "land grabbers."

Retelling experiences

Fifty-one delegates, aged 11-17 years old, confirmed on Sunday these details of the Philippine report that relied on the retelling of children's experiences from 1990 to 2005.

In an executive summary of the three-day consultation led by Unicef, the delegates said society's harsh treatment of children "cripple [their] pursuit of contentment, and blinds [them] to the light at the end of the tunnel."

Delegates, who were asked to explain possible solutions to the abuses, offered concrete suggestions.

"We hope people who beat up street children who make mistakes should be punished," a group of delegates said in Filipino.

Another group asked television networks to stop airing images of beheadings.

Lina Laygo, executive director of the Council for the Welfare of Children, said the report concluded that 43 percent of the country's 80 million people (roughly 38 million Filipino youth) are vulnerable to many cases of abuse that range from a verbal reprimand to child pornography.

Poverty issue

But the report to Unicef takes care not to blame poverty for the cases of child abuse.

"Most instances or forms of violence against Filipino children are attributed to poverty, but [this attribution] without examining its different dimensions other than inadequate income perpetuates the bias against the poor," it said.

"Poverty in the Philippines is characterized by a chronic or cyclical condition of deprivation of basic services that include basic education, durable housing and clothing," the report said.

It cited government claims that only more than 5.13 million Filipinos are considered poor.

But poverty has been at the root of some of the problems. In a 1993 government study, the country discovered that 16 percent of surveyed households have children aged below 12 "who were left unattended or with no adult supervision."

The report said "limited economic opportunities" had changed the work landscape, creating solo parenting.

The Philippine government only allocated 0.078 percent of its budget from 1996 to 2000 for child welfare (approximately P2.09 billion for five years), according to the report, citing a study on resource allocation trends.

The report cited weaknesses in child protection laws and suggested drafting "specific legislation" that would criminalize child pornography and pedophilia.

It also urged the creation of a law that institutionalizes a juvenile justice system to promote rehabilitation.

In their executive report, the children-delegates asked for a policy that makes it mandatory for government to consult children about laws affecting them.

Haribon forum tackles bird flu

FEARS OF A PANDEMIC ARE ESCALATING with the spread of the so-called H5N1 bird flu strain from Southeast Asia to Europe.

But what exactly is bird flu? Does it originate from poultry or wild birds? Is there a cause for concern? Are we prepared to deal with it? What are the steps the government is undertaking to prevent it from affecting us?

These are some issues for discussion in the November forum of Haribon Foundation, which will be held today starting at 5:30 p.m. at the Meralco Mini-Theater in the Ortigas Center. The resource panel includes bird experts and officials of the Department of Environment and Natural Resources' Protected Areas and Wildlife Bureau, the Department of Health, and the Department of Agriculture.

The forum is free and open to the public.

RP program seen to attract foreign patients

By David S. Goss

THE STATE'S health care system is looking to attract foreign patients with a new program that will allow them to receive care at a reduced cost. The program, which is being piloted in the state's largest hospitals, is expected to attract a significant number of patients from abroad, particularly from the United Kingdom and the Netherlands. The program is being implemented by the state's health department, which is working closely with the state's major hospitals to ensure that the program is successful. The program is expected to generate significant revenue for the state's health care system, which is facing a significant budget deficit. The program is also expected to provide a valuable service to foreign patients, who are often able to receive care at a lower cost than in their own countries.

Abstract—The authors examined the effects of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program on the health-related quality of life of older adults with arthritis. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The study population consisted of 100 older adults with arthritis, who were randomly assigned to either a walking program or a control group. The walking program consisted of 12 weeks of supervised walking, 3 times per week, for 30 minutes. The control group received no intervention. The primary outcome measure was the Health-Related Quality of Life (HRQL) score, which was measured using the SF-36 questionnaire. The results showed that the walking program significantly improved the HRQL score of the participants compared to the control group. The authors concluded that a supervised walking program can improve the HRQL of older adults with arthritis.

Figure 1 consists of four vertically stacked plots showing the time evolution of the probability density function $P(x, t)$ for a random walk. The top plot is at $t=0$, showing a single peak at $x=0$. The second plot is at $t=10^4$, showing a slightly wider peak. The third plot is at $t=10^5$, showing a more spread-out distribution. The bottom plot is at $t=10^6$, showing a very broad, flat distribution. The x-axis for all plots ranges from -100 to 100, and the y-axis ranges from 0 to 1.0.

Endless baking pleasure

By Roger Dyer-Davis

IN THE 1980s, a popular genre for a book on cooking was the "cookbook for dummies." The idea was to provide a step-by-step guide to a particular recipe, often with a "tips" section to help the reader avoid common mistakes.

Now, however, the "cookbook for dummies" has become a thing of the past. Instead, the focus is on the "cookbook for professionals." The idea is to provide a step-by-step guide to a particular recipe, often with a "tips" section to help the reader avoid common mistakes.

Ate Ming's Kamote and Bread Pudding

By Mariella Marquez

I REMEMBER HOW, AS A kid, my siblings and I would run to the house after a day's play to be greeted by the delicious aroma of hot, creamy homemade pudding.

The dish was created by someone who had become part of our family, our longtime helper Ate Ming. Pleasant-looking and cheerful, Ate Ming has been with my family for 45 years. She is as dedicated to our family that she chose not to have a family of her own.

The homemade kamote and bread pudding is very economical. It uses simple ingredients easily found in any kitchen. The main ingredients is left-over bread or purchased (as long as this is not stale), and the very affordable kamote which gives the pudding that extra kick.

As kids, we always reserved the skins of our loaf bread. Ate Ming made sure these did not go to waste.

The recipe is easy to follow and requires no fancy cooking techniques or high-tech kitchen gadgets. Ate Ming prefers to choose her special pudding using a very simple and traditional method: mixing by hand. In fact, we jokingly refer to her pudding as "Lila" or "Linaoan at Linaoan." However, she always made sure her hands were clean.

Three generations of the family have enjoyed this wonderful dish—from my parents to my generation and now my children's generation. This homemade kamote and bread pudding is usually eaten for merienda, but it can be served as any course of the day when one wants a quick, homemade.

Eggs part 3

Fried eggs—The freshest eggs are the best for frying. Use a non-stick skillet, heat and do a "water test" temperature test on the pan. Add a small amount of oil or butter. Break eggs into the skillet, reduce heat to low. Cook until whites are completely and yolk begins to turn opaque. Season with salt and pepper.

Four types of fried eggs:

Sunny side up—cooked until whites are just set.

Over easy—cooked until whites are set, then given a flip and cooked for 30 seconds to form a film over the yolk.

Over well—eggs cooked until completely set, 1 minute.

Scram-fried—sunny-side up eggs splashed with a teaspoon of water once the whites set, then given a final minute of cooking on a covered skillet.
